

There are many for-profit and non-for-profit recruitment agencies. Recruiters in Canada cannot legally charge workers for their services. The non-for-profit agencies are being paid by the government and the for-profit ones- by the employers. When employers are working with the for-profit recruitment agencies, they often offer lower wages to the candidates to compensate for the expenses. Your salary for the same position might be higher if you found the job on your own in comparison with the one found through a recruitment agency.
